

Luciana Sampogna

Luciana can trace her love for Italian Food from the early stages of her childhood. She would be carefully watching her mother stirring a traditional Venetian polenta or helping her grandmother make the eternal melanzane ripiene.

Luciana opened her first cooking school in Auckland, New Zealand in 1998 and it was with great enthusiasm that Luciana then opened her cooking school, Cucina Italiana, in Sydney in 2002.

Keeping Italian flavours alive and pure has been important to Luciana Sampogna, ensuring that her beloved culture would never be misinterpreted. Sampogna has long wanted to record her passion and tell the stories she learned from generations ago through her family. With a strong desire to truly capture the essence of her childhood and culture, she finally crumbled to student's requests and this year has released her first cookbook with Murdoch Publishers.
